Group

Insurance and service revenue*¹

¥2,848.5 billion
 (This includes ¥2,692.6 billion in revenues from insurance and reinsurance*²)

(+24.9% YoY)

- Increased, driven by higher insurance and service revenue at Nippon Life and acquisition of Resolution Life as a wholly owned subsidiary.

Core operating profit

¥260.8 billion

(+24.7% YoY)

- Increased, driven by higher core operating profit at Nippon Life, Nippon Wealth Life, and Taiju Life.

Individual insurance/annuities
Domestic life insuranceAnnualized new premium

¥130.2 billion

(-4.4% YoY)

- Decreased, reflecting a decline at Nippon Wealth Life, which more than offset increases at Nippon Life and Taiju Life.

Annualized premium in force

¥5,014.6 billion

(vs end-FY2025 +0.4%)

- Remained flat, as an increase at Nippon Wealth Life offset a decline at Nippon Life.

*1 Total amount of insurance and service revenue represents Nippon Life's unique metric combining revenues from insurance and reinsurance with other ordinary income.

*2 Total figures for revenues from insurance and reinsurance are calculated using data from Nippon Life, Taiju Life, Nippon Wealth Life, Hanasaku Life, Nissay Plus SSI, Resolution Life, Acenda Group, and Nippon Life Insurance Company of America.

- ※ Total figures are calculated based on core operating profit of Nippon Life, Taiju Life, Nippon Wealth Life and Hanasaku Life, along with net income before taxes of overseas life insurance subsidiaries and affiliates, domestic and overseas asset management subsidiaries and affiliates, and life support and healthcare subsidiaries and affiliates, with adjustment based on the stock ownership ratio and some internal transactions, excluding interest rate fluctuations.
- ※ Investment yield margin and net insurance-related gains are based on total amount of domestic life insurance.
- ※ Figures for subsidiaries are calculated based on the stock ownership ratio during each fiscal year.
- ※ Nippon Life's certain expenses related to overseas and asset management businesses had previously been recorded in operating expenses and other ordinary expenses. From FY2026, they are recorded in investment expenses. The figures for investment yield margin and net insurance-related gains for FY2025 have been retrospectively adjusted.
- ※ [Company name] Corebridge: Corebridge Financial, Inc.
- * 1 Variance is not shown for Resolution Life due to a change in the stock ownership ratio in October 2025.
- * 2 Variance is not shown because the recognition of core operating profit from Acenda Group has started from November 2025.

③ Core operating profit

(Billions of Yen)

※ FY2025 figures for Resolution Life constitute the results calculated based on the stock ownership ratio applied before its acquisition as a wholly owned subsidiary.

※ FY2025 figures for Acenda Group constitute results achieved by Nippon Life Insurance Australia and New Zealand Limited.

④ ESR / Value of new business

- Internal model-based ESR decreased compared to the end of March 2026 mainly due to the impact of rising interest rates.
- Value of new business increased year on year, mainly reflecting higher sales of single premium whole life insurance products and group annuity products at Nippon Life.

Internal model-based ESR

Value of new business

(Billions of Yen)

Risk buffer (numerator) ¥21.0 trillion

¥22.6 trillion

Risk amount (denominator) ¥10.8 trillion

¥11.9 trillion

※ Internal model-based ESR is a soundness indicator calculated using the Company's internal model, which measures the sufficiency of capital (risk buffer) relative to the risk amount based on economic value.

※ Solvency margin ratio (ESR calculated in accordance with applicable notifications; hereinafter "regulatory ESR") is 195% on a consolidated basis and 206% on a nonconsolidated basis, both exceeding the supervisory intervention threshold of 100%.

※ The regulatory ESR and internal model-based ESR as of June 30, 2026 were calculated on a simplified basis.
